DISTRICT OF NEVADA

Weslie Martin,

Plaintiff

v.

Brian Williams, et al.,

Defendants

Case No.: 2:19-cv-01815-JAD-BNW

Order Dismissing Action

[ECF No. 10]

Plaintiff Weslie Martin brings this civil-rights case under § 1983 for events he alleges occurred during his incarceration at High Desert State Prison.¹ On September 29, 2020, the magistrate judge ordered Martin to file an updated address with the court by October 28, 2020.² The magistrate judge expressly warned him that his failure to timely comply with the order would result in the dismissal of this case.³ The deadline has passed, and Martin has not filed an updated address.

District courts have the inherent power to control their dockets and “[i]n the exercise of that power, they may impose sanctions including, where appropriate . . . dismissal” of a case.⁴ A court may dismiss an action with prejudice based on a party’s failure to prosecute an action, failure to obey a court order, or failure to comply with local rules.⁵ In determining whether to dismiss an action for lack of prosecution, failure to obey a court order, or failure to comply with local rules, the court must consider several factors: (1) the public's interest in expeditious resolution of litigation; (2) the court's need to manage its docket; (3) the risk of prejudice to the defendants; (4) the public policy favoring disposition of cases on their merits; and (5) the availability of less drastic alternatives.⁶

I find that the first two factors—the public's interest in expeditiously resolving the litigation and the court's interest in managing the docket—weigh in favor of dismissing this case. The risk-of-prejudice factor also weighs in favor of dismissal because a presumption of injury arises from the occurrence of unreasonable delay in filing a pleading ordered by the court or prosecuting an action.⁷ The fourth factor is greatly outweighed by the factors in favor of dismissal, and a court's warning to a party that his failure to obey the court's order will result in dismissal satisfies the consideration-of-alternatives requirement.⁸ Martin was warned that his case would be dismissed without prejudice if he failed to update his address by October 28, 2020.⁹ So, Martin had adequate warning that his failure to update his address would result in this case's dismissal.
